

Special Needs Assisted Living Residence (SNALR) Memory Care

A Special Needs Assisted Living Residence (SNALR) is a licensed Assisted Living Residence that has additional certification from the New York State Department of Health. These facilities provide specialized services to meet the unique needs of older adults who have been given a medical diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or other recognized forms of dementia. These needs include around-the-clock supervision and assistance with daily activities, 24-hour security and supportive services. Staff is given additional training to accommodate the needs of residents with memory loss and other dementias. These services could include help with dressing, medication management, personal hygiene, mobility and other activities that become more and more challenging with time.
